Negro Suffrage.

Several of the States of the Old West have refused at the ballot-box, to adopt negro suffrage. Of these, Ohio, Iowa and Minnesota may be mentioned. One of the heaviest arguments against the Fifteenth Amendment offered by the Democratic party is that it goes back of the rights always exercised by the States, and enforces negro suffrage upon the States which have rejected it, else visiting upon them a penalty. Lewis D. Campbell of Ohio, formerly a prominent Republican, in a letter to a friend expresses himself opposed to the enforcement of the new suffrage rule upon the people of that State.

He says, first, that he remains unchanged and uncompromising in his opposition to any extension of the right of suffrage, believing that if any change is to be made, it would be better to curtail it than to extend it. As for negro suffrage, it was, he says, upon that vital point that he severed his connection with the Republican party; and if it should now be found important to extend the voting privilege in Ohio, he would much prefer giving it to the women than the negroes. He is "especially opposed to the fraudulent means through which the Republican party are persistently endeavoring to fasten negro suffrage upon Ohio;" and he condemns the alarming aggressions which the party calling itself Republican has made upon the principles which constitute a republican government. The currency he regards as certainly in a bad condition; he would not have the government repudiate any of its bonds, "but pay all according to contract," he never having entertained a doubt of the propriety or justice of paying off the bonds in greenbacks where the contract does not expressly provide for the payment of coin. In conclusion, he says, that although originally a protectionist, observation and experience have greatly modified his views on this subject, and he is not prepared to say that he would even now oppose the throwing open of our ports of entry to all the nations of the earth who would open theirs to us."

ABOUT ADVERTISING.—A contemporary says: "The man who dares not read the advertisements in his paper can never be said to be well informed. The advertisements indicate not only the business enterprise but the enterprise of the advertiser. When you see a man who advertises liberally, you may be certain of finding a good stock of goods in his store, that he keeps up with the market, and sells more (and can therefore afford to sell cheaper) than those who do not advertise. If you want bargains, always patronize those who avail themselves of the advantages afforded through the advertising columns of the paper."

REMARKABLE.—A New York journal tells a remarkable story of a man at Tennant's harbor, who, being out in his boat, fell overboard, and not being able to swim, conceived the idea of striking the bottom and footing it ashore. Accordingly shutting his eyes and his teeth firmly together, he struck out for the shore, until thinking he must be near land, he opened his eyes, and found himself in the middle of a corn-field. This beats Weston all hollow, as a walkist.

The old proverb that "money makes the mare go," has been put into a poetical shape by Mr. Farquharson, a shoemaker, who is one of the contributors to a volume of poems written by the laboring class, and recently published in Scotland:

Money is honor, trust and worth,
And fulfils they are who do it;
The fairest face, the noblest birth,
Are bubbles 'a' without it.
The hope o' youth, the staff o' age,
Makes ilka day see sunny;
If you would pass for saint or sage,
Be carefu' o' your money.

A new circus trick, just introduced in Paris, is for a man to leap from a height of eighty feet and bound back again to the original spot. The performer is fastened to an elastic cord.

The greatest wisdom of speech is to know when, and what, and where to speak—the time, matter, manner. The next to it is silence.

Imperfect enjoyment is attended with regret; a surfeit of pleasure with disgust. There is a certain moment, a certain medium to be observed, with which few people are acquainted.

A character which combines the love of enjoyment with the love of duty, and the ability to perform it, is the one whose unfoldings give the greatest promise of perfection.

One of the aims in farming should be to produce as far as possible everything you need to consume—to buy nothing you can raise yourself.

There is nothing purer than honesty; nothing sweeter than charity; nothing warmer than love; nothing brighter than virtue, and nothing more steadfast than faith.
